Social and Personal

Mrs. William Hodges Mann gave the first series of at-homes in the Executive Mansion yesterday afternoon, when a number of friends called. Mrs. Mann received in the blue room with the table decorated with a silver vase of American Beauty roses.

The most important society event of this evening will be the big reception tendered by the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. Mann to Governor-elect Henry C. Stuart and Mrs. Stuart, and the members of the General Assembly. Several hundred guests will be present, and the debutante set has been invited to remain after receiving hours for an informal dance.

Luncheon Next Week.
Mrs. Thomas Albert Smyth has sent out invitations for a buffet luncheon to be given in her new home, 2336 Monument Avenue, from 1:30 to 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday, January 22.

Prominent Engagement.
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Lee, of 1611 West Grace Street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dallas Chesterman, to Ensign Ronald P. P. Mclellan, United States Navy, attached to the Ohio. The marriage will take place early in April. Miss Lee, who is a lovely girl, made her debut in Richmond last season, and her wedding this spring will be an event of the greatest interest to society in Richmond and throughout the State.

For Miss Calhoun.
Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Starke, of 915 West Franklin Street, were hosts at a dinner dance at their home last evening in honor of Miss Zayde Branch and her guest, Miss Harriet Calhoun, of Atlanta, Ga. A number of other func-

GRANT OF PRECEDENCE TO COUNT GLEICHEN

Former Military Attache of British Embassy Is Signally Honored.

BY LA MARQUE DE FONTENAY.
WERE General Count Gleichen, formerly military attache of the British embassy at Washington, not so personally popular, there would be a storm of protest in England caused by the warrant just issued by King George, granting to the count "place, pre-eminence and precedence" immediately next to the dukes of England and before the marquesses of the realm, and to his wife, the Countess Gleichen, formerly Miss Sylvia Edwards, maid of honor of Queen Alexandra, and a granddaughter of the third Lord Kensington, precedence immediately after the duchesses, and before the countesses of the realm.

The warrant likewise provides that the count's sisters, namely, the Countesses Feodora and Helena Gleichen, and Countess Victoria, wife of Percy Marshall, should rank immediately before the daughters of dukes of England.

In order to appreciate what this means, it is necessary to recall the fact that General Count Gleichen and his sisters are the issue of a morganatic marriage between Queen Victoria's nephew, the late Admiral Prince Victor Hohenlohe-Langenburg, and Lady Laura Seymour, sister of the fifth Marquis of Hertford. The union of Prince Victor Hohenlohe and Lady Laura Seymour was not recognized as a full-blooded marriage, that is, a "marriage equal de droit," because of the Continental courts of Europe, and it was because of their refusal to recognize Prince Victor's wife as a princess of Hohenlohe, or to permit her to use that title, that the husband made his home altogether in England, dropped his title of Prince of Hohenlohe, and styled himself Count Gleichen, by virtue of a patent of that dignity granted to him by Queen Victoria's German brother-in-law, Duke Ernest of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

When Prince Victor Hohenlohe died, in 1891, neither his widow nor his children were allowed any provision from the immense entailed family estates of the German mediatorial house of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, to which all the duking of the family are entitled. Indeed, it was Queen Victoria, who accorded to them annuities out of her privy purse; annuities which were continued by King Edward, and which are still enjoyed to this day by Count Gleichen and his sisters. Nor are they permitted to use the princely titles, the name or arms of Hohenlohe.

It is a pity that King George, if he wished to establish the precedence of General Count Gleichen above the marquesses of England, did not bestow an English dukedom upon his relative. If that had been done, the count's sisters would have quite the right, and in accordance with the usual practice, received the precedence of dukes' daughters. It would have been far better to accord the precedence of an English dukedom to a Saxe-Coburg dignity of count, held by one who is the issue of a morganatic or left-handed marriage of a German prince.

It may be argued that all marriages contracted in England, according to English law, are complete and binding in every respect, and that morganatic marriages are no less so when solemnized by English law. That is perfectly true. But the fact remains that it was only very shortly before Prince Victor Hohenlohe's death that his aunt, Queen Victoria, issued a warrant authorizing to style herself Princess Hohenlohe at the court of St. James; an authorization which caused great indignation in Continental courts, and especially among the members of the royal family. Up to that time Prince Victor's wife had never been allowed by Queen Victoria to call herself anything but Countess Gleichen.

It is claimed in London that this grant of precedence to Count Gleichen is preparatory to the issue of a similar warrant according precedence before the members of the royal family to the Duke of Teck, and Prince Alexander of Teck. Their mother was an English royal princess, namely, Princess Mary, sister of the late Duke of Cambridge, and in her day the most popular member of the reigning family. But Princess Mary's husband was the issue of a morganatic marriage between Prince Alexander of Wurtemberg and in his younger days, when serving in the Austrian cavalry, he had to be content with the rank and title of Count Francis Hohenstein. He was only created a Wurtemberg Duke of nothing can be done to help Miss Matie Tyler, aged sixty-eight, widow of a grandnephew of John Tyler, former President of the United States, who is now postmistress at Courtland, Southampton County, to hold her position. A day or two ago a civil service examination was held at Courtland to secure a postmaster, and she desired to stand for the examination. This was refused her by the commission on the ground that she is more than sixty-five years of age.

Regardless of the opposition to Miss Tyler by certain patrons of the Courtland office, who claim that she is not giving the office the attention it deserves, the Post-Office Department and the Civil Service Commission are proceeding on the ground that, inasmuch as the position pays more than $500 a year, and as Miss Tyler is more than sixty-five years of age, she is ineligible.

In spite of strong influence and sentiment brought to bear for Miss Tyler, there is apparently nothing more for her to do.
